Chairman's Chatter

To research, develop AND promote lavender essential oil and associated products of the highest quality

Report from the Chair

Well we are now past the shortest day and many of us are still experiencing warmer than usual weather. I guess most of us are all in rest mode, catching up on maintenance or better still overseas seeking the sun.

Natural Health and Supplements bill

Since the last link I have been closely following the developments of the Natural Health and Supplements bill. The third reading of the bill was supposed to have happened and passed into law many weeks ago but at the time of writing this has not happened. Also the submissions made were supposed to be listed on the Ministry of Health website but this also has not happened. Once enacted the regulatory scheme will be phased in over three years.

The bill will mean that all products it covers will need to be registered with the Natural Health and Supplementary Products Authority unless an exemption is granted. Our submission augured that the products that we mostly involved with are not medicines or taken internally so therefore should be exempted. We have yet to hear if this position is accepted. This bill had its genesis and first reading in September 2011. NZLGA first made submissions to this bill in Feb 2012 and the bill was subsequently amended to a more producer friendly version although this is debatable as the core requirements of white listing all ingredients instead of the more cost effective way of black listing all band ingredients are still there. The bill had its second reading in March 2013. We again made submissions in Feb 2016 and so we wait in the dark for the political wheels to turn.

Website developments.

With the basic website now looking stable we are now embarking on the next stage to expand the user database with a number of selectable categories that describe your business. The categories selected will then be displayed in you profile and on your trail map business card. These categories will also link to the "for sale" section so anyone visiting the website will see what services our members offer. The object is to give every member, who chooses to, a more visible profile. We are also starting to record where our website enquires come from, be it from web searches or advertising etc. so we can start measuring the effectiveness of the website and advertising. So far we have had a noticeable increase in website enquires with this new website. Many enquires have been about starting new Lavender farms, business opportunities and Lavender plants. As always I welcome your suggestions and input.

Conference 2016.

The south Island conference team chaired by Russell have put considerable effort into making this conference a must attend for all members and with a special focus for new members. Conferences are always a great opportunity for networking or just simply having a good time with old friends. I trust many of you will make the effort to attend and help contribute to its success. I especially look forward to the opportunity of meeting you all.

The future.

With the association reaching a milestone of 20 years I think it is a time to reflect on the associations success in its main goal of improving the quality of oil produced in NZ and ask the question, where to from here? We have mostly achieved our primary goal though our annual oil awards program and with a noticeable increase in the number of awards achieved. We are also now attracting many international entries so we are starting to be recognised worldwide. With many of our farms producing quality oil I believe it is time for the association to look towards the NZ market and research our NZ manufactures who use lavender oil in their products. Much of this oil I believe is imported.

There should be opportunities for our members if we can learn and define the characteristics of the oil required. I believe we also need to be more active in promoting Lavender oil through our websites and other media, specifically targeting manufactures. We need to look towards educating our NZ market for the opportunities to open.

Your Executive.

For the association to remain relevant to our members I would encourage any member who has an interest in the running of the association to put their name forward for election to the Executive. For too long now we have relied on a hard core of members who have now served on the Executive for a long time. New blood brings new ideas and new energy to the association. It is vital that members new or old step forward and help lead this great organisation.

Looking forward to seeing you at the AGM and Conference.

Cheers

Peter Jemmett

From the Editor

What an exciting event the executive has put together for the Annual General Meeting and Bi-Annual Conference. I am only sorry I cant attend and catch up with the good people I met last year.

This season has been very mixed with all of us experiencing crazy weather patterns and plants flowering much later than expected. Now that some of our plants are in the ground they are away and looking very good. As Mike mentions later in the 'Link' we are running out of room and enjoyed immensely having the Northern Regional Meeting at our urban patch in June.

The advice and friendship that we receive from these meetings is invaluable. ... Included below are the minutes of our meeting...

From the Northern Region

Hi all on the 11 th of this month those of us who could, found our way to a Grey Lynn property occupied by Helen and Tony for our Northern Region meeting. A two level house overlooking the park, the house has a fairly small section sloping down to the park. 80% of the section is covered in pallets loaded with lavender plants of varying ages. Probably over 1000 at a guess, only Tony would Know. Definitely the most compact lavender farm I have ever seen.

After the usual good lunch and general catch up the 8 of us present went on to the meeting. It appears that the three different ways of treating yellowing plants (blood and bone-Pauline , lime-Peter and thrive,-Mike ) on trial since the last meeting, all worked as all the yellowing has gone.

Some very interesting discussion on propagating. The different mediums and techniques, but more importantly the reasons why each of us do things the way we do. This brings a greater understanding of the whole subject.

Peter gave a report from the Chair re our submissions to the government.

Update on web site

Update on the conference. If you can go you should, not only to learn and share knowledge but to build contacts.

Two remits on the definition and rights of overseas members both people and countries will be going to conference from the region.

Thanks again to Tony and Helen for their hospitality and you are all invited to the next meeting same format at Paulines place ( Leafy Hollow ) on Sat 1st of October.

Bring your smile, see you there

Come One Come All To the Tinwald School Hall

Our Bi-annual Lavender Conference Early September 2016 Fri 9th – Mon 12th

This starts on Friday 9th with registrations from 4pm and a Cocktail evening from 7 -9pm with a surprise event.

We have an innovative current range of speakers , with a representative of Barkers Foods as our main speaker. Based at Geraldine, Barker's products appear in every supermarket in the country and they now export their preserves world- wide, so having started as a cottage industry, they've explored the labyrinth of production, packaging, labelling, freighting and now exporting of a perishable commodity similar to our Lavender Oil and we think their experiences will be invaluable for those just starting out and our already established businesses alike.

If you are just starting on your 'Lavender Path' so to speak, we have a New Growers Workshop especially for you where the networking will be invaluable and plants are for sale and to order.

We have a range of current topics namely:

Distillery Equipment and Boiler Safety, Health & Safety updates to the current legislation and how they affect Lavender Growers in particular.

Two of our Oil Judges will explain the mysteries of choosing your lavender oil for inclusion in the Supreme Oil Awards in 'easy to understand language' which is easier than you might think.

The Oil Awards & Dinner are being held in a 'themed restaurant' and there will be a chance to 'dress up' if you wish. Our Dinner speaker is Elsie Hall who is a very innovative lady, one of our past Chairpersons and one of the pioneers of the Lavender Industry in our country.

We also have some craft workshops so you can get your 'Creative groove on' and take home something you've made yourself.

Monday is dedicated to a Bus Tour of the Geraldine/Ashburton area and is free to attend,

Geraldine is one of the South Islands 'Tourist attractions' and we will visit some of these and other properties in the area.

There is a large contingent of stall holders coming along including one from Australia who will have samples of linen items to order, there will be plants to buy, the public will be invited in as well so a good chance to have a stall yourself if you wish, or just come and shop for a lavender themed something you've been wanting for a while.

We also have some members who will have recently returned from visiting lavender growers overseas in France the UK and the USA and they will be updating us on any hints/tips/changes etc that may be happening in the wider world.

We hope to have an international contingent of folks as well for you all to meet.

Get your 'early bird' registrations in before end of June and we'll see you all there.

A South Island Trip for Great Barrier Lavender

For many years now we have had our Lavender Still Boiler stored at my work's warehouse in Christchurch gathering dust in a long forgotten corner. That is till our new warehouse manager found it and wanted it moved. This was just the galvanisation needed plus Margaret's insistence that we should be distilling our own oil this coming Christmas.

Moving it north to its final destination on Great Barrier Island did present some logistical challenges, not least the weight of the Boiler, 750Kg and a 6 meter length of chimney.

After looking at many options, Mike Alspach very generously offered his Ute for the job. After considering this we thought it was a great idea for a week's holiday and a chance to visit long lost friends along the way and so started our adventure. After swapping vehicles with Mike we left Te Awamutu at the leisurely time of 9am for an 8hr trip to Wellington.

We spent a Day in Wellington visiting Cindy then the morning boat to Picton and on to the Wairarapa Valley to stay with friends we have not seen for many years. While there we visited Elsie Hall who just happened to live next door. We had an interesting tour of her lavender farm and shop.

The next morning it was on to Christchurch to pick up the Boiler. It was a bit of a shock when the boiler was loaded as to just how far the Ute sank down on its springs. A quick check of the Utes manual relieved our doubts but did suggest we put more air into the tires. With this done we gingerly drove away back up to Amberley and a night with Eleanor and Patrick. Eleanor had invited Charlotte and Keith for dinner and we had a great evening discussing many topics and of course Lavender things.

In the morning a beautiful sunny day dawned and we had a great drive up the coast stopping at the Seal Colony for a cup of tea. While there we took a walk up the track to the nursery pool where many of the young pups spend the day while their parents are out getting food for them.

By now we were well used to the extra weight on the Ute and headed once again North to Kaitiaki and a quick visit to Myra McClelland Lavendyl Farm who had recently taken it over from Corry Zeestraten. Back to the Wairarapa Valley for the night and then onto Picton and across the strait on a perfectly calm day.

The trip north was uneventful with a stop at Tokaanu for a rest at the hot pools then onto Auckland. Back in Auckland and when trying to reposition the boiler on Ute for the trip to the Barrier we discovered it was full of water. I have no idea how much water it takes but it took a long time to drain. With the Ute now a bit light it was a good opportunity to load other equipment and building stuff on.

Now fully loaded we headed for the ferry for the 4 ½ hour trip. Fortunately it was a calm sailing and after a 30 minute drive we made it to the house. The boiler being too heavy, even without the water, for the digger to lift, I had to make a frame over the Ute tray to lift the boiler up with two chain blocks, drive the Ute away, then lower it to the ground still on its transportation pallet. To make it easier to move the Boiler into position I had fitted caster wheels to the Pallet. Now all I had to do is to remove the Pallet, fit the chimney, wire up the float switches and water pump but all this is for another day.

After a short break on the Barrier, mowing, weeding, chopping wood and more work on the house it was back to the big smoke and down to Te Awamutu to return the Ute, now with a few more kms on the clock but with new wind-screen wipers. Many thanks to Mike and Marian for the loan of the Ute.

Cheers

Peter & Margaret

Leighvander Cottage

The past season in our patch has been the strangest yet.
Our beautiful valley, [Wairau] in Marlborough experienced very late severe frosts which wiped out the crops.
We then went to 30 + degree days for many weeks.

Our site is 500ft above sea level and our soil, perfect for growing lavender as I am sure most of you know.

Around March we started to have re-growth and by May some nice heads, an overall display for the late tour groups.

It has been most interesting to note many sports, mainly pink, even a total colour change on a site at family property in Blenheim [12ft above sea level].

As I am developing new variety's am extremely interested in the botanical. I have found it to be most interesting.

In the research I am involved with overseas I know that heat can effect colour change so most likely that is what has occurred here, would be keen to hear if any other growers have noticed this.

Graceleigh one of my variety's came about from a sport.

25yrs growing and something new occurring all the time, guess the journey never ends!

Elsie.

Thoughts from an old Lavender Grower

We had a Northern Regional meeting in Auckland scheduled for Sat 11 June and everyone knows its a long way to Auckland from Pirongia. And so as we did not want to be late Marion I and set out on Monday the 6th. Made it as far as Whitianga on the first day.

As is so often the case, friends leave the area they had lived in for years and everyone says we will come and visit, well it took us three years but we finally caught up with our friend Heather and had a good look around Whitianga. Very nice in June but apparently a different beast in summer when the population swells to out of control.

The following day we went to Whangarei where we caught up with family members. Then on to Dargaville to visit a lavender farm just starting up, almost inside the town boundary.

Belinda and Ray have some flat river flats that dry to rock hard in summer and can get wet in winter. They have access to bulk mulch and spread this around, worked up the ground and then humped it up to create strips of dry soil. Any one who says it is too wet to grow lavender in the North should go and meet these people. Their plantings so far look very good and their plans for the future are ambitious to say the least. I wish them all the best

On the south side of Dargaville is an area called Arapahui where my brother has a beef farm. Always a good visit as my brother has an opinion on everything, not always correct so conversation is never dull and the hospitality is generous.

Down through Helenville to Grey Lynn and to the meeting place where we arrived 10 minutes early, Tony and Helen are dangerously close to being the largest lavender grower in the Northern Region by plant numbers. He currently has about 1000 planted at his brothers farmlet and another 1000 on pallets in the garden of the house he rents in Grey Lynn. They are running out of room and the general advice was that as the lavender in pots come into flower he should go to markets and sell some. Apart from the income it will make room for the ones that still need potting up. The meeting was fun, friendly and informative. See report in this issue.

Going to meetings should not be considered a chore but an adventure waiting to happen. It does not have to be a 5 day trip as we did. But a day trip to visit friends and to exchange views, opinions and information about a common interest. Distance is not a barrier but a small obstacle to be easily overcome to achieve a goal.

Mike and Marion

NZLGA Library News

Hi everyone

Below are the latest additions to the NZLGA Library

B077

Field Distillation for Herbaceous Oils by Tim Denny

3rd Edition 2001

This might not sound the most exciting title but is a 'must read' for anyone considering building a still, purchasing a still or wanting to gain an in depth knowledge of the distillation process.

We already have Edition 1 in the Library but it has been so well read that it is falling apart. "Since the 1991 edition was first issued over sixty improvements have been included in the text of later printings..... Twenty eight of these concern major advances in our understanding of the distillation process and our ability to use it." – Tim Denny

B073

Lovely Lavender – the many applications and uses of lavender essential oil

By Rashelle Johnson 2013

A small but surprising book. There is an interesting section full of facts and anecdotes about the history of lavender and an informative section about the composition of lavender essential oil.

The section on health benefits (21 cited) is fairly impressive but comes with a page full of disclaimers.

There are a number of original recipes and concoctions using lavender as an essential ingredient. The Homemade Lavender Scented Playdough was well received by my grandchildren.

An unusual chapter on Making Your Own Lavender Essential Oil in which the author claims that "Essential oil is fairly easy to make yourself at home", using alcohol, pestle and mortar, mason jars and coffee filters, will raise many eyebrows from commercial growers!

The following three books are written by Sally Hornsey who runs "Plush Folly", a private cosmetic training company in the UK.

"Sally has taught many students how to design a range of skincare products for their own use and has given students the skills and knowledge they need to establish a flourishing business"

An excellent reference book. The only downside is that some ingredients are difficult to source in NZ so a suitable substitute must be identified.
